HOME FOR THE AGED AND ILL PLANNED FOR SOUTHSIDE VA. AREA

Although it is still in the discussion stage, a home for the chronically ill and aged may in time become a reality if a project being sponsored by District 7 of the Virginia Conference of Social Work is successful.

Delegates to a recent meeting at Blackstone presided over by the Rev. Edwin T. Williams, of Lawrenceville, vice president of District 7, and chairman of the district committee on the home for the aged and chronically ill, discussed the question with Robert D. Ham, director of the state Bureau of Medical and Nursing Facilities, and John L. Brunner, chief of the hospitalization and homes for adults section of the state Department of Welfare and Institutions.

W. Roland Walker, of Kenbridge, member of the Board of Welfare for Lunenburg County, endorsed the plan, and said, "We need a home that will take care of the people nobody want. We have in Lunenburg County people who need the care such a home could give—we need it worst than anything else."

Mrs. Frances Moon, of Farmville, president of district 7, said that the social work conference was interested in providing a home for all types of aged people whose families cannot afford to take care of them and who need nursing and individual care. She also pointed out that due to the prohibitive cost it is impossible to place the needy aged in private homes. The district facility as envisioned by the social work conference would look after a different group of citizenry than those who are ordinarily provided for by the private institution and would be a cooperative effort on the part of the counties of the Southside Virginia area.

Mr. Ham pointed out that Virginia has an annual allotment of $94,000 in Hill-Burton Act funds for the construction of nursing homes and to his knowledge the District 7 group was the first to consider this means of financing such a project. Under the act, the community provides 45 per cent of the funds.

The counties of the area to be served by the home include Amelia, Appomattox, Buckingham, Brunswick, Charlotte, Cumberland, Lunenburg, Nelson, Mecklenburg, Nottoway, Prince Edward, Powhatan, Granville, and Dinwiddie.

Serving on the committee for Home for the Aged and Chronically Ill will be the Rev. Mr. Williams, and James S. Godsey, of Cumberland, W. Roland Walker, of Kenbridge; Dr. J. D. Hagood, of Clover, and Judge Emerson D. Baugh, of Lawrenceville.

Evening separates are not new but you will see many advertised as just the thing for the coming holiday parties if you are on a limited budget. The chiffon evening skirt is coupled with a jeweled cashmere or with a cashmere that is fashioned after a bathing suit top.

Kinard reminded Davis that, several days before, he had told him to pick up his car that morning to do some work on it and that Davis' car was at Kinard's place.

IDEA FROM RURAL CARRIER ADOPTED NATIONALLY

An experiment started eight years ago by the Postmaster of Fergus Falls, Minnesota and one of his rural letter carriers to help rural patrons to better Christmas mail service has mushroomed into a national project, Acting Postmaster General Maurice H. Stans announced today.

As a result of the project started by Postmaster John L. Townley, Jr. and Rural Carrier William Krauss of Fergus Falls, all rural patrons in the nation will receive about the first week of this month, special instructions for preparing and mailing Christmas messages and packages, Mr. Stans said.

Attractively printed in green ink, the instruction sheet urges rural patrons to:

1. Buy stamps well in advance of the Christmas rush to avoid delay and ease the carrier's burden.
2. Use first class, 3-cent mail for Christmas cards. Be sure to add a return address on each card.
3. Separate cards for local and out-of-town delivery, tie bundles of each firmly, with stamps facing the same direction. Use slips of paper to designate which bundle is local and which is out-of-town.
4. Wrap carefully and address plainly all packages and tie with cord or strong twine. Place a card inside each parcel containing sender's name and address in case the writing on the parcel becomes illegible en route.
5. If a letter is enclosed, mark the package, "First Class Mail Enclosed" and pay postage for first class letter plus parcel post charge.
6. For proof of delivery of first class letter mail use Certified Mail. Insure valuable parcels.
7. Keep approaches to rural boxes clear of snow and other obstructions. If impossible, rural box may be temporarily relocated to expedite mail delivery.
8. If parcels are expected that are too large to fit in the rural box, advise the rural carrier how they are to be delivered.

The Fergus Falls post office began this Yuletide aid during the holiday season of 1948. An immediate success, it was adopted by the Minnesota Association of Rural Letter Carriers in 1955 and by the National Association of Rural Letter Carriers at its 1956 National Convention.
